

BULGARIA GETS ADDITIONAL 24 HOURS FOR DECISION

REASON FOR EXTENSION IS UNKNOWN

SLAV ULTIMATUM WAS NOT DELIVERED AT SOFIA UNTIL MONDAY AFTERNOON.

RUSSIA ADMITS DELAY

Difficulty of Telegraphic Communication or Some Other Unexplained Cause, Gives Bulgars More Time.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Oct. 5.—Whether by delay in telegraphic communications or by some other unexplained cause, Bulgaria has obtained an additional twenty-four hours in which to decide her course.

The time limit of the Russian ultimatum demanding that King Ferdinand break with the central powers did not expire yesterday afternoon as had been reported, and the Bulgarian government had opportunity of delaying its decision until mid-afternoon today.

Wait Results.

The Petrograd dispatch making the explanation, reached London this forenoon, to the effect that the first editions of the newspaper followed the lead of morning newspapers that by their silence Bulgaria had definitely committed herself to a Turco-Toutonic alliance, but with troops of the allies ready with Russian squadrons in the Black Sea, prepared to attack Bulgarian forts, and with Bulgarian forces along both Serbian and Greek frontiers, there was no chance of a little chance of any development which would prevent Bulgaria from allying herself against the allies.

Greek Report.

Special dispatches from Athens regarding the sailing ships already have been received by Bulgaria, and the Greeks being fired upon, and escaping.

An official message reaching London from Athens, says that authorities immediately after conclusion of the recent convention with Turkey, ordered all Greek and other Christians to leave the Balkans of the Turkish army to take refuge in Bulgaria, and delivered them to the Turkish authorities. At the same time, according to the advice, large quantities of food and supplies have been sent to Turkey from Bulgaria.

No official report has been issued from Athens regarding the situation. According to Athens, three-fifths of the Bulgarian forces are to go to the Serbian frontier and the remainder will hold the Greek line.

Are Disappointed.

The loss of the Hohenlohe-Roman near La Bassa, as announced yesterday by Field Marshal French, would mean a disappointment to the British troops, after their rush forward over comparatively wide front, did not give sufficient time to consolidate their position.

The commander's admission of the loss was in accordance with the statement that German counter attacks had been directed off along the remainder of the front.

Sees Effects.

Military writers profess to see already the effects of the offensive in the Balkans. The Russians are holding the Germans before Dvinsk and apparently are giving little ground elsewhere.

Blames Russia.

It is Russia which has precipitated the trouble in the Balkans by insisting that a handful of German officers should be expelled from Bulgaria. The Russian comment on the situation to the Associated Press today. The Russian took the stand that Bulgaria had been committed to the central powers, and that it was not Bulgaria that committed them.

No preparations have been made for losing the legation here, it is added, "and none will be made, notwithstanding by the British government necessities such a step."

Germany Surprised.
Berlin, Oct. 5.—Germany's ultimatum to Bulgaria was received here with astonishment, says the Overseas News Agency. The political world was amazed that Russia, after her recent defeat on the battlefield, should find the courage to make an aggressive movement of this nature. It means simply the violation of the sovereign rights of an independent state.

A diplomat, who is not in Berlin, when questioned concerning the news of the landing of the ultimatum at Sofia, asked where the entente powers would find troops for this purpose. He added that the attitude of Great Britain, who during a fight, knows an interested onlooker on the head until he obtains his friendship and help.

Withdraw Promises.
London, Oct. 5.—Continued from page 1. The statement that the offer of the entente powers to Bulgaria, conditioned on her adhesion to the allies in the war, has now been withdrawn.

Delivered Monday.
Petrograd, via London, Oct. 5.—Russia's ultimatum to Bulgaria was delivered to Premier Radoslavoff at Sofia until four o'clock yesterday.

Previous advice from Petrograd that the Russian ultimatum had been delivered on Sunday and that it was a reply to a demand, expired yesterday. As this period did not begin until the time of actual delivery of the ultimatum the Bulgarian government has until four o'clock today in which to decide whether to accept a policy of strict neutrality or side openly with Germany, Austria and Turkey.

Paris, Oct. 5.—Russia's ultimatum to Bulgaria is welcomed in Paris as a means of clearing the Balkan situation. Little doubt is felt here that France will take similar action and that if the Russian minister departs from Sofia, he will be accompanied by representatives of Great Britain, France and Italy.

Gen. Herbert and other specialists in foreign politics are agreed that the allies must strike hard and quick if they are to accomplish their purpose in the Balkans, and that half measures would be worse than useless. They state that the entente powers would send 500,000 or 600,000 men.

It is stated that the Italians have 500,000 men under arms. Owing to the position of Italy in reference to certain Balkan peoples, the Italians might be precluded from landing troops at Saloniki, but suggestions have been made that they might assist the British and French at the Dardanelles.

It is conceded that if Bulgaria should enter the war, the situation would be a dangerous one for the allies. Unless this blow was parried quickly, military strategists believe the Serbians might be crushed both in the Balkans and on the south, in both, and Bulgarians on the south, in which case a Teutonic army might reach Constantinople in a comparatively short time.

Agree on Serbian Attack.
Milan, Oct. 5.—Telegraphing from a military convention was signed between Bulgaria, Germany and Austria some time ago, according to a Sofia dispatch to the Associated Press. By the terms of this treaty, the dispatch says, the Bulgarian army is bound to attack Serbia with six divisions in the Nish-Pinar section and to destroy railroad communications with Saloniki, thus delaying the allies in their efforts to aid Serbia.

Entente Sends Ultimatum?
Paris, Oct. 5.—Telegraphing from Nish, Serbia, under yesterday's date, the correspondent of the Havas News Agency says:
Serb Cabinet Changes.
Nish, Serbia, Oct. 4, via Paris, Oct. 5.—Dr. M. R. Venich, Serbian minister to France, has been appointed minister of finance in succession to M. Paschout, who retired on account of ill-health. Dragomir Stojanovich, secretary general of the foreign office, has been appointed minister to France.

Boats Shall City.
Berlin, Oct. 5.—Reports received from a taxi cab, he was surprised to find that two torpedo boats, one of which was French, have shelled that city, says the Overseas News Agency. The municipal hospital, which flew the Red Cross flag, was destroyed and one of the inmates killed.

New York, Oct. 5.—Constantine T. Dumba, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador to Washington, recalled at request of President Wilson, sailed for home today on the liner Nieuw Amsterdam. He was accompanied by Mrs. Dumba.
As soon as the former ambassador stepped from a taxi cab, he was surrounded by newspapermen. He readily agreed to pose for photographs and walked to the end of the pier, where the light was better. He said:
"I hear no ill will toward this country nor its people. I am deeply sorry to leave at the present time, for I have made many friends here and I had hoped to stay longer, to see more of the country and its people. That is all."

TELEGRAPH RATE WILL SOON BE RAISED IN LONDON
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
London, Oct. 5.—Along with the rise in the price of nearly everything else, the telegraph rate in the United Kingdom will probably soon be raised. It is reported that the postal authorities in the telegraph lines are government controlled in Great Britain—are considering increasing from twelve to eighteen pence the rate for sending a twelve word message, address and signature to be counted as words as heretofore. The twelve cent rate has been in force thirty years.

SIXTY NEW MEMBERS SECURED FIRST DAY

Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN FOR 800 MEMBERS STARTS WITH A BURST OF SPEED.

TEN TEAMS AT WORK

Thirty-Five Paid Memberships and Twenty-Five Promises of Membership Result of Monday's Work.

Sixty new members for the Janesville Y. M. C. A. were secured as a result of the first day of the intensive campaign according to the reports of the captains of the ten teams as submitted at the supper last evening at the Y. M. C. A. building. Thirty-five paid memberships were listed, netting Janesville a total membership of 340, or third among the five cities entered, and in addition between twenty or twenty-five new members of membership, or members who were not able to pay the fee in cash, were reported. In the ranking of the cities, only the paid membership of the Y. M. C. A. is determining the final result and the winner of the contest.

At noon today the Buick team, headed by Roger Cunningham, was in the lead, with record of 140 miles, or seven new paid members, a distance of twenty miles being credited for each new membership. The Overland and Mitchell teams, with 120 miles each to their credit, were pushing the leaders close.

The members of the teams are being all energies to secure paid memberships, as they will count in the final results, which will be figured on Saturday. Secretary Bearmore hopes to boost the Janesville membership to 800, which means that 500 new members must be secured in five days.

New members may be secured from among the younger boys as well as among the young men, as the total enrollment in the association will include juniors, intermediates, seniors and business men. In consequence fathers and mothers will be called on by the teams in an effort to boost the enrollment of younger boys who would enter the junior and intermediate divisions.

The teams as they ranked at noon today are as follows: Ford, 90 miles; Buick, 140 miles; Overland, 120 miles; Mitchell, 120 miles; Maxwell, not reported; Dodge, 80 miles; Studebaker, 80 miles; Hudson, 80 miles; Cadillac, not reported; Cadillac, 80 miles.

WILL BEGIN WORK ON CITY'S BUDGET

Estimates of Various Departments Are Due and Action Will Be Taken Shortly by the Council.

During the present week reports from the city departments on the amounts for the next year's expenses will be presented to the council, to be considered by the commissioners in the making up of the annual budget for the government of the city.

The budget appropriations will be discussed by the commissioners within the next two weeks and the amount decided on in preparation for the making up of the tax levy.

It is doubtful this year if the city will be able to keep the city tax rate as low as last year, when the rate was $9.50 on each thousand dollars. This rate was the lowest in the state. It is expected that the board of education will seek for more money than given last year, and several of the other departments have increased expenses. There are large balances left in some of the city departments, and the ordinance proposed by Mayor Patters to eliminate the ward districts and divide the city into two highway districts divided by the river is passed, the ward funds will be done away with.

The council will also consider the petition of Chief of Police P. D. Champlin for an automobile patrol and a flashlight system of a more modern type. It is expected that the city commission may provide for the purchase of the automobile, but it is doubtful if it will grant the money for a new flashlight system. The present balances in the city department funds must supply the city until taxes are collected next year.

The state tax rate last year was $2.35 and the county $1.50, making a total rate of $1.40 for Janesville property owners.

"MUTT AND JEFF" IN COMICAL CARICATURE

Two Cartoon Heroes in College Cause Myers Theatre Audience to Chuckle the Same as the Newspaper Cartoons.

Mutt and Jeff in College was conceived for philanthropic purposes, to cheer mankind and make them forget their real or imaginary troubles, and it has been eminently successful. One does not have to stretch their imagination to any very great extent to conceive how funny the play must have been. The story, music, lyrics, scenery and every detail were all new. Embodied in this production was all the meat of standard amusement, the wit of melodrama, the side splitting situations of the farce comedy, the extravagance and unseemly brilliancy of the burlesque and the harmonious art of the musical comedy.

INSTALL NEW HYDRANTS AT COUNTY FARM BARN.

Two new hydrants have been installed and the water mains extended to the barn at the county farm, increasing fire protection. Work at the county farm is well under way according to Superintendent Whipple, with fall plowing completed and 15 acres of corn and clover now being worked. Silage filling will come later in the month.

TWO CHILDREN HAD CROUP. The two children of J. W. Nix, merchant, Cleveland, Ga., had croup last winter. One was a boy of 5, the other a girl of 8 years. Mr. Nix writes: "Both got so choked up they could hardly breathe and could not save them Foley's Honey and Tar and nothing else and it entirely cured them. This reliable medicine should be in every home as it gives immediate relief from colds, coughs and croup, heals raw inflamed throat and loosens phlegm. W. T. Sherer."

RECEPTION TONIGHT IN BOYS' DEPARTMENT

Opening of Boys' Department at the "Y" Takes Place in Form of Reception—Program Arranged.

Everything is in complete readiness for the opening reception of the boys' department at the Young Men's Christian association this evening at 7:30. The decoration committee worked hard last night, and this afternoon setting the rooms in shape for tonight. In the reading room a new oak table has been added for the magazines and the walls have been decorated with banners and pictures. The windows have been equipped with green shades which add very much to the appearance of the rooms. In the game room the boys will certainly find a homelike. A comfortable window seat has been constructed in the front window and a number of easy chairs have been put in the room. The rooms in this department make an ideal place for the young boys to spend their idle moments. It is expected that a large number of people will attend the opening, as the citizens of Janesville have taken great interest in the Y. M. C. A. work. The program that the boys have arranged will begin about eight o'clock and refreshments will be served during the evening.

ELECTRIC WARSHIP NEW VENTURE IN U. S.

Ship California Now Under Construction Will Be a Ship of Innovations.—Propelled by Electricity.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, Oct. 5.—The new battleship California will be the world's first electric dreadnaught and from point of size will be greater than any foreign battleship now on the way to completion.

The California will be a ship of innovations. It will cost $7,500,000 without her armor or armament which is expected to cost as much more. She will have a speed of twenty-one knots an hour, will be 224 feet long, 37 feet wide, will have a beam and will draw 30 feet of water. She will carry twelve fourteen-inch guns, mounted three abreast in a turret, twenty-two five-inch rapid fire guns and will have four submerged torpedo tubes.

The principal feature of the new dreadnaught, however, is the machinery for propelling her by electricity. She will be driven by motors which will deliver electricity made by steam. The navy experts believe the electric installation is cheaper than steam propulsion and reduces the weight of machinery. The collier Jupiter has been so successful with electric machinery that the navy feels justified in adapting it to a dreadnaught.

Outwardly the California will bring a drastic change of line and appearance to the battleship. Instead of the blunt gray nose of the present day big fighter her bows will be tapered into a graceful yacht-like stem much like those of the famous clipper sailing ships that carried the American flag at the head of the world's swiftest craft in the 40's and 50's. It will be the first time since the steel ships replaced the old frigates and ships of the line that clipper masts have been seen in the fleet. Her overhanging bow will project more than twenty feet beyond her waterline and will give place for three anchors instead of two as on the present ships. The third will hang plumb over the stem. The new bow will make for keeping the California a dry ship, as the sails are keeping her foredeck free of water in all but the heaviest weather. The fine underwater lines of the other ships which make for speed have been carried above the waterline on the California and her bows will be dished near the deck line, so when she does not cut through a wave she will lift her head over it.

OUTLOOK IN EUROPE.

In making its summary of the European situation the "Nation" says that in the first weeks of the war, when the stupendous onrush of the German armies towards Paris held the world's fascinated attention, the dominant thought in the general mind was that of the great tradition of German invincibility. Would 1914 be the repetition, on a grander and more awful scale, of 1866 and 1870? That question seemed to be answered at the Marne, in the early days of September. What Prussia had done to Austria at Sadowna, what Germany had done at France at Sedan, was not to be done to the allies in the culminating test of Germanic prowess. The war was to be a trial of strength not between men and supermen, but between nations worthy of one another's steel. Might was the military power of Germany continued to show itself both on the eastern and on the western front, impressive as she was at once in resources, in valor, and in mastery of the art of war, the feeling of the world was that the fundamental factors in the case were against her and were bound to the end to determine the result.

Already speaking, this continued to be the prevailing feeling outside of Germany, until the inception of the magnificent German campaign against Russia in the late spring. From the beginning of the Gallian drive on the east of Mar to the fall of Warsaw on the fifth of August and beyond that, the attention of the world was chiefly centered on an exhibition of German power calculated to revive those ideas of its uniqueness and almost omnipotence which the check administered to it at the Marne had dispelled. The utter disappointment of the early hopes of the allies at the Dardanelles served by contrast strongly to emphasize this impression. And finally there came, in the one department in which Germany had theretofore seemed an utter failure, developments which appeared to betoken an unexpected success of incalculable value to the German cause. Bulgaria's mobilization was looked upon as a threefold assurance of further signal advance for the Teutonic powers; it was a victory for German diplomacy, it was a sign that a Balkan power peculiarly keen in the weighing of chances had come to the conclusion that the Teutonic allies would win, and it was in itself—if it meant what it seemed to mean—a reinforcement of the most signal kind in that quarter of the field in which impending events were of most crucial character. It is safe to say that at no time since the coming back of the first tide of German invasion in France has there been, in this country at least, so near an approach to the acceptance of the idea of German invincibility as there was a week ago.

The beginnings of a reaction had, however, been furnished before that time. For some weeks it had been plain that Russia's resistance had not collapsed, that Germany would not be free to rely on an indefinite number of troops from the fighting there and use them against Serbia or France as best suited her calculations. Then came clear proof that the Bulgarian mobilization was not to mean what it had seemed to mean; Greece had something to say, and the forces of the entente powers had something to say. And it was on top of this that the news of the great allied offensive on the western front came as a reminder of realities which had been lost sight of, but which had all along been in the background. What will be the net outcome of this offensive, whether it will fundamentally alter the position of the German invaders, is a question upon which it would be idle to make predictions. But it is not too much to say that, conjoined with the disappointment of the Germans' hope both of decisive results in Russia and of a radical change in their favor in the Balkans, the manifestation of allied strength on the western line means an alteration of profound importance in the character of the situation.

In saying this, we have in mind a factor that is too often overlooked in speculations concerning the probable or possible duration of the war. If the war could not be brought to an end satisfactory to the allies except by the exhaustion of Germany's powers of resistance, the prospect would be appalling indeed; and yet, when anybody suggests a termination short of this, he is almost sure to be told that the Germans are unanimously in favor of fighting to the bitter end, that they will sacrifice the last man and endure the utmost hardship before they will yield. There is no doubt of their patriotism or their devotion. But in this, as in military prowess, they are simply men, not supermen. What they feel, and sincerely feel, today furnishes no evidence whatever as to how they will feel if their almost complete confidence in ultimate victory shall have been turned into an almost complete certainty that ultimate victory is impossible. The success of the recent loan was hailed with paeans of joy by the Kaiser and the leading German newspapers not only because it was a proof of patriotism, but quite as much because it was a proof of the people's sure expectation of the triumph of the German arms. Their cheerfulness in subscribing to the loan, their readiness to have the nation incur the debt, was referred not only to loyalty, but perhaps even more emphatically to the certainty that not Germany, but the "guilty nations," would have to bear the burden. When this vision of sure victory fades, when the prospect of staggering indemnities to be paid by England and France is abandoned, when all that can be looked for is at best a continuance of fearful sacrifice of life and treasure, with no compensation in sight, is it not absurd to suppose that the German people will continue to stand "unanimously" for infinite slaughter and suffering? They are, as is evident, by no means unanimous now; but the dissenting voices are naturally hardly heard so long as the ear of the nation is attuned to the sound of victory, past and future. What gives to every serious setback to the German arms a significance truly momentous is not simply its military consequence, but the possibility it holds out of hastening the beginning of that change in German feeling about the war upon which, more than upon anything else, the hope of its termination in a reasonably near future must rest.

THOMPSON'S STAND.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago has dared to take the stand of law enforcement as regards saloons in the Windy City keeping open on Sundays. Not even the most earnest advocate of temperance expected such a stand to be taken by the chief executive of Chicago, although it is about as hard for the uninitiated to get a drink in New York on the Sabbath day as to discover a spring in the desert of Sahara. As for Pennsylvania, the state law is rigidly enforced and even Washington, D. C., is a dry place Sunday, although wet enough the rest of the week. Now comes Chicago. Will wonders never cease? Next thing we know Milwaukee saloons and bars will have to close Sunday. However, all joking aside, Mayor Thompson has taken a stand in the right direction and Chicago people will realize it before long.

Spain has ordered something over a million dollars' worth of fuses from American manufacturers. Now say that the Spanish war was not good advertising? They know where to get the best material when they want it, both on the eastern and on the western front, impressive as she was at once in resources, in valor, and in mastery of the art of war, the feeling of the world was that the fundamental factors in the case were against her and were bound to the end to determine the result.

No one thought to take moving pictures of young Mr. Rockefeller's trip to Colorado, yet it has meant more to labor than the trip of any other single individual in years.

With its two expositions California is as interesting as a three-ring circus to eastern visitors this year and lots have traveled westward to enjoy the sight.

Bifurcated citizenship is going out of fashion in this country and even some of the smaller cities are showing their disapproval of its existence.

Football players might learn a whole lot about bucking the line if they spent a few weeks on the western battle front of the European war.

You can talk from coast to coast now by wireless, but only a few can think of anything sufficiently interesting to say at the prices charged.

While the battle rages on the western front the Balkan nations will resume their seats on the fence of neutrality.

Making bread and beds is fine exercise but trying to tell time by an ankle watch has them both beat to a frazzle.

Planjacks with maple syrup are a fine substitute for the brown October ale these frosty mornings.

A New York woman has been sentenced to three months in jail for beating her husband. The lesson to be gathered from the incident is that no man should be permitted to marry until he is capable of defending himself.

Frankly admitting that the baby resembles its father is the shortest way. It is also the safest.

When it comes to combing a customer's hair, the barber does his best. But that is all that can be said for the job.

The New York woman who left her money to her lawyer merely took the shortest cut. Ordinarily there is more or less circumlocution in vesting the title to a client's property in his attorney.

If a man is afraid to say it himself he nearly always asks a newspaper to do it for him.

There are all kinds of chumps, including the one who has a ship tattooed on his arm.

"The lunch counter," says one of the advertisements, "is the cause of indigestion, dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, and heart disease." The lunch counter will have to be more careful. It is getting over into the cigarette's territory.

One of the compensations of life is that a man can't study himself through a microscope.

It may be true that marriage is a failure. But so, for that matter, is remaining unmarried.

On the Spur of the Moment

SPUR OF THE MOMENT.

The Modern Farm. (Continued.) I remember, I remember, The house where I was born; The little window where the sun Came peeping in at morn.

For dad is up to date. And the farm is bright and gay. From the back lot to the gate. The house and barn are lighted With bright acetylene. The engine in the yard Is run by gasoline; We have silos, we have a tank; We have dynamo and things; A telephone for gossip, And a phonograph that sings.

The little window where the sun Came peeping in at morn. No more high up in the eaves That cost a car of corn. Our milkmaid is pneumatic And she's sanitary, yes; But dad gets 15 cents a gal. For milk that once brought less.

Speaking of Powder. "Throw up your hands!" the robber said. The girl still help her ground and put a little powder on her nose. She rushed out in the street and stopped as autos flew around and put a little powder on her nose. A safe was falling from a floor just as she stepped out. The workmen shouted as the girl came tripping by. She opened up her handbag and while others tried to fly she put a little powder on her nose.

One day the girl was ill and when the doctor said she'd die, she put a little powder on her nose. And just before she passed away she gave a little sigh and put a little powder on her nose. St. Peter met her at the gates and offered her his hand. "Step in," he said. "We welcome you where all's so sublime and grand." "Excuse me just a moment," said the maiden and she put a little powder on her nose.

Another Fatal Spot. Headline in Van Buren county paper: Man Stabs His Mother-in-Law in the Kitchen.

Ambition. Let others work and lose their health In piling up the sordid wealth. But that is not my wish. Let others burn the midnight oil, Disturb the peace of sleeping spools; I'd rather sit and fish.

Let others solve the problems great, Afflict the affairs of state; None of it I care to do. Let others lead the nation's path And bear the thankless public's wrath; I'd rather sit and fish.

Let others lead the strenuous life, That's full of worry, toil and strife; But that's not my ambition. Let others wear their lives away, By living five years every day; I'd rather sit and fish.

From the Skinnerville Signal. Having purchased a new type casting machine, we are now prepared to set ads in any style desired. We can also furnish wedding cards of any desired length. We shall continue to make improvements rapidly. Our national cuts are not up to the mark as yet, the picture of Asseman Jones having been mistaken for a night scene in the flooded district, but with a new screen and camera, we soon hope to do better work. Our advertising rates have not been increased but this is not due to our disinclination to give them a boost. We talked it over with several merchants and so the ads will remain with present rates. Our P. C. has intimated that the merchants told us to go to a vicinity far remote from this town, but we hurried back this life with the usual score always employed by us when we do this hurtling act. Hit the trail to the subscription desk. Job printing in two colors.

Well, it isn't it? Chicago boasts of the fact that she has the lowest tax rate in the United States. It evidently isn't worth much to get anywhere in Chicago.

To Our Patrons:— We want you to see "The Cup of Life" tonight. You took our word on "Enoch Arden" and "The Mating" and came to see them. You were not disappointed, and you will not be tonight. "The Cup of Life" is a remarkable picture; this is not only our judgment, but the judgment of those who saw it when we showed it before.

It is a picture in the same class with the "32 movies" now running regularly in New York and Chicago, produced by the same people with the same care, and based upon just as good a story. The only difference is that this was made several months ago, before Directors Ince and Griffith left the Mutual Company.

Bessie Barriscale plays the leading role; a part well adapted to her abilities, and she plays it with a skill that will hold your closest attention. Take our word: see the picture.

And She's the Last. Situation begins to look hopeless. Even Mme. de Thebes can't tell when the war will end.

The Daily Novelette

AT LAST. With his head buried in his hands as the laughing, chattering crowd swept past the bench, Ankles Hydrock sat there moodily down at the grass, caring not for the pretty dough-daisies and cross-eyed Susans springing up in it as he watched.

All about, dinglebirds twittered in the trees and a cat-o-nine-tails whispered in the bushes. But all these symptoms of nature meant nothing to Ankles Hydrock. The festive couples passed him by the hundreds, and he thought angrily. "How much longer? How much longer?"

A red and white stitcheirp sang sweetly in a nearby magaroon tree, and a blue parkward sneezed cheerily but Ankles Hydrock moved not. It grew late, later, latest. The moon came out and went back. "Will these fool people never go home?" he thought despairingly.

At last there was no one in the park but our moody hero. With a sigh of relief he rose and departed, for now there was nobody to see the big note he had torn in the back of his trousers.

To Our Patrons:— We want you to see "The Cup of Life" tonight. You took our word on "Enoch Arden" and "The Mating" and came to see them. You were not disappointed, and you will not be tonight. "The Cup of Life" is a remarkable picture; this is not only our judgment, but the judgment of those who saw it when we showed it before.

It is a picture in the same class with the "32 movies" now running regularly in New York and Chicago, produced by the same people with the same care, and based upon just as good a story. The only difference is that this was made several months ago, before Directors Ince and Griffith left the Mutual Company.

Bessie Barriscale plays the leading role; a part well adapted to her abilities, and she plays it with a skill that will hold your closest attention. Take our word: see the picture.

And She's the Last. Situation begins to look hopeless. Even Mme. de Thebes can't tell when the war will end.

The Daily Novelette

AT LAST. With his head buried in his hands as the laughing, chattering crowd swept past the bench, Ankles Hydrock sat there moodily down at the grass, caring not for the pretty dough-daisies and cross-eyed Susans springing up in it as he watched.

All about, dinglebirds twittered in the trees and a cat-o-nine-tails whispered in the bushes. But all these symptoms of nature meant nothing to Ankles Hydrock. The festive couples passed him by the hundreds, and he thought angrily. "How much longer? How much longer?"

A red and white stitcheirp sang sweetly in a nearby magaroon tree, and a blue parkward sneezed cheerily but Ankles Hydrock moved not. It grew late, later, latest. The moon came out and went back. "Will these fool people never go home?" he thought despairingly.

At last there was no one in the park but our moody hero. With a sigh of relief he rose and departed, for now there was nobody to see the big note he had torn in the back of his trousers.

TRACTION COMPANY SURRENDERS THEIR FRANCHISE TO CITY
Seek Indeterminate Permit Under Railroad Commission to Operate in This City.
The Janesville Traction company today filed with the railroad commission of Wisconsin and the city clerk of Janesville a surrender of its franchise to operate a street railway, and applied for an indeterminate permit. The permit will be granted by the railroad commission, as a matter of course.
When questioned about this action on the part of the Janesville Traction company, Thomas S. Nolan, its attorney, and one of its directors, stated the proceeding, that most of the public utilities in the state had taken the same course.
The Janesville Water company, prior to its purchase by the city, had given up its franchise and the Janesville Electric company is also operating under a similar permit. It placed the company more directly under the control of the railroad commission.

AN EXCITING CHASE IS WON BY OFFICER
Patrolman Wins Marathon Race With Joe Bush—Has Not Recovered His Breath Yet.
Officer W. E. Gower, desk sergeant, showed yesterday that he was as good a distance runner as the city has, and his prowess in the exercise of sprinting was far from being a mere show, for whom Gower did the sprinting. If there had been a moving picture operator in the city yesterday afternoon he would have obtained a full two-reel film of a most exciting chase between Officer Gower and Joe Bush, and nearly every "kid" in the fifth ward had the time of his young life.

The police department received a call in the afternoon that Bush, who is said to be subnormal mentally, had escaped from a house on Chestnut street, and had done a smart job of clothes than those which grace the fair September Morn.
The officer went to the residence and found no trace of Bush. Up and down the street he looked in vain. Finally he spied a head of thick hair of unusual length in bushes about a half block away. The eyes in this thick matted head were watching him intently and he gave chase. As soon as the officer moved his way, Bush, for it was Bush, dodged out from behind the bush with speed that would have made a horse blink. He looked like a crippled snail. Down toward the river sped Bush with a close second and about a hundred yards behind him. The fact that Bush had no shoes or stockings to protect his feet did not hamper his speed a mile. The officer chased him about a block behind and near the water works. Bush ducked in behind buildings. He jumped over broken glass, piled over discarded pipes, ducked through debris and dodged in and out of alleys. He was certainly doing the first lap of the race in jig time.
Over the closely woven wire fence went Bush and the officer was stuck. As the policeman had to go around Bush got another good start and made good use of his lead.
The officer finally trapped Bush and caught up with him when both were on the verge of exhaustion. "If he had started running again I probably would have been down and watch him leave his shadow behind," said the officer.
Bush was returned to the house and it took about an hour to pick burrs from his hair, which was clogged with the burrs, from going through weeds and bushes.
"I haven't got back my breath yet," said Officer Gower this morning, when asked about his chase.

SCHOOL BOARD ASKS FOR APPROPRIATION OF FIFTY THOUSAND
Increase of Six Thousand Dollars in No Way Extravagant, Board Members Believe.
At the meeting of the school board last evening the budget for the coming school year was submitted and after discussion it was voted that it be voted to ask for appropriation of $50,000 from the city commission. This is an increase over the amount appropriated for a year ago of $40,000. Members of the board were confident that the estimate was in no way extravagant as Janesville is spending far less on the city schools than many cities much smaller in population. The estimate made out included salaries for teachers and a general increase in running expenses of the schools accounts for the need of a $6,000 boost in the appropriation.
Another matter which received attention last evening was the crowded condition of the school which is found to be too small to accommodate the enrollment of more than 500 students. A committee was appointed to investigate the matter and report to the board. It is probable that the city council will be consulted.

MRS. ADELIN SOWLE IS CALLED BY DEATH
Mother of Mrs. Perry Miller Dies at Age of Ninety-six Years—Old County Resident.
Mrs. Adeline J. Sowle, aged ninety-six years, a resident of Rock county for over half a century, passed away early this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Perry Miller, of 525 North Washington street.
Mrs. Sowle was born at Bolton, Conn., on Aug. 11, 1819. In the year 1839 she came west to Menasha, Mich., and resided there until 1842, when her husband and she came to Rock county and settled at Milton. Prior to this she had lived in the town of Milton, where she was united in marriage to Mr. Perry Miller. Since Mr. Sowle's death on January 21, 1891, she has resided with her daughter at Marinette, Milwaukee, Appleton, Kenosha, and for the past two years in this city.
Four children came of the union, two daughters—Cornelia A. Sowle, who became the wife of Rev. J. Richardson, who occupied pupils in this vicinity, and Josephine R. Sowle, wife of Rev. Perry Miller, at whose home she died; and two sons, Isaac and William E. Sowle, both of whom were Civil war veterans, and William E. Sowle, who died in 1908.
The funeral will be held at one o'clock Thursday noon at the home of Mrs. Miller. The remains will be taken to Milton for interment in the family lot at this place. The service will be held at 3 o'clock.

CANADIAN TROOPERS USE INDIAN SCHEME
Cover Their Encampment With Mystical Signs and Savage Gunning.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Paris, Oct. 5.—"The life of the Canadians at the front takes one back to the tales of the North American Indians, who were the delight of our youth," writes Maurice Barres, the French Academician, who is on a visit to the fighting lines as the guest of the French staff.
"This week," he explains, I saw the huts of the Canadians, but they were saved lengthwise, exactly like the log cabins which they build for hunting boxes or the log houses they inhabit sometimes in the prairies north of the Great Lakes.
"A survival of the old Indian romance is found in the Canadian army. Trappers in khaki were shown me who make use of the thousand tricks of their trade against the enemy. They hunt him with the willingness of the old scalp-hunters, toned down by English humanity.
"Following the tracks of the Germans crawling across the corn fields the Canadian manages to creep along without causing a single leaf to move. They remain for hours on the watch, by the bushes and stumps of the ground around them by means of a little mirror. Should the Germans, reassured by the long silence over the hills, venture out, he is pounced upon, bound with ropes in a couple of seconds. The other day, after a series of such fruitful exploits, the Canadian scouts threw over into the German trenches a number of live carous, inscribed: 'It is useless for you to send out any more patrols; you have Canadians in front of you.' These volunteers are many of them modern Canadians, business men, professional men, workmen. All are not sons of trappers or backwoods-men. But it is a fact that they have more initiative, more ingenuity and more enterprise than European soldiers. And to look at them, what tenacity there is in their expression! Examining their military transport vans, all marked with the maple leaf, when by eyes fell on a little tent covered with weird stripes and figures in green paint.
"What is that, I asked.
"A Canadian officer's tent."
"But those green signs?"
"Nothing! The background has merely been arranged so that from above, it will seem to form part of the meadows and woods."
"But I had recognized, amid the stripes of paint, various hieroglyphs which again took my mind back to the days of the Redskins—the cat's head, the black-hand, and finally the Swastika, that talisman which has come down to us from the farthest ages."

Bed Table for Invalid.
If a bed-table is not available for the invalid, the leaf of the sewing machine will make a good substitute, or a sewing table, two legs resting upon the floor, the other two turned under. A few books placed upon the bed will prop up the other end of the table and prevent it from pressing upon the patient.
Danger Passed.
When you have endured a few times at the good things of life and beckoned to them in friendly fashion, you will actually be able to laugh honestly and simply—not at what hurt you once, but with a full faith in the fact that it can hurt you no longer.

NOW IS THE TIME TO VISIT CALIFORNIA
A trip to California some day, no doubt you have promised yourself and family. Right now is your opportunity to make good that promise. Harvest is over—the yields have been large and the markets good—therefore, you have both means and the leisure to make the trip. Never again will you be able to see as much of the great West for so small a cost. Weather conditions now along the entire Coast are ideal for sight-seeing. The California Fairs are in full swing and at the height of their glory. They seem to have been planned for the American farmer for both give far more attention to features that touch on his welfare than any previous fairs.
Low fare excursions, including both Pacific Northwest and the return, via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.
You have the choice of two superb steel-equipped trains—"THE PACIFIC LIMITED" and "THE SAN FRANCISCO LIMITED"—each going through and direct, in fast time, to California.
No farmer should neglect to see the Pacific Northwest on the return. Inspect this empire of opportunity. Stop off at any point, examine the country, talk to the settlers and learn first-hand of the wonderful fields opened up for the farmer from a half to third less per acre than middle West or eastern land.

Bed Table for Invalid.
If a bed-table is not available for the invalid, the leaf of the sewing machine will make a good substitute, or a sewing table, two legs resting upon the floor, the other two turned under. A few books placed upon the bed will prop up the other end of the table and prevent it from pressing upon the patient.
Danger Passed.
When you have endured a few times at the good things of life and beckoned to them in friendly fashion, you will actually be able to laugh honestly and simply—not at what hurt you once, but with a full faith in the fact that it can hurt you no longer.

Dickens' Opportunities.
Every writer knows how limiting the mere desire for popularity can be to creative work. By having constantly to keep in mind the importance of sustaining his success, of appealing to the popular taste, Dickens was continually kept back. If he could have worked for work's sake, he might have produced far greater masterpieces than those now associated with his fame. In this way he might have helped to bring popular taste to a higher level.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Sweet Pickled Peaches.—Select ripe but firm fruit, free from blemishes; peel them carefully. Allow a pound of sugar to a pint of good cider vinegar, place whole cloves and cinnamon in a bag and boil in the vinegar. When vinegar has come to a boil, drop in the peaches (a few at a time) and let them remain till done through, but not soft or broken; then remove carefully with a skimmer and place them in jars. Repeat till peaches are all done, then fill jars with remaining vinegar and seal while warm. In the same manner may be made sweet pickled pears, plums, crab apples and cherries.

Bordeaux Sauce.—Slice one quart green tomatoes, two quarts cabbage, five small onions and one red pepper; then add half teaspoon allspice, half teaspoon turmeric, one tablespoon celery seed, one cup sugar, and one quart vinegar. Boil slowly twenty minutes. Seal in jars or bottles. This sauce is excellent for all kinds of meats.

TO PRESERVE EGGS.

Add one pint silicate of soda (water glass) to nine pints water, then cool mixture and mix thoroughly. Put in fresh eggs carefully, small end down. This amount preserves five dozen eggs. Keep in cool place in stone crocks.

THE TABLE.

Egg Fritters.—Take some well-drained poached eggs, break them up with a well-beaten yolk of egg, then bread crumbs. Fry a moment in very hot butter. Serve with fried potatoes.

Round Steak Steamed.—Purchase amount of steak desired 1½ inches thick. Place steak in skillet, brown on both sides, remove steak and make a brown gravy. Put meat in steamer, pour gravy over it, steam three to four hours. If one hasn't a steamer, put meat and gravy in stewpan, then put this pan into a larger pan with just enough water in pan to keep from boiling over into the meat; place lid on large pan, steam this way for four hours. Meat cooked this way retains its flavor and is very tender.

Potatoes a la Maitre.—Take six large green peppers cut tops, remove seeds, put in pan of cold water until following is ready: Filling: Fry half pound (ground) steak until partially cooked; add one cup tomato sauce; fry until meat is well cooked, remove from fire, add one cup bread crumbs, half cup grated cheese, one teaspoon salt, half tablespoon sugar, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one egg well beaten. Sprig of parsley chopped fine. Fill peppers with this, then fry peppers in deep fat until a rich golden color.

Peach Conserve.—Allow a cup and a fourth of sugar to a pint of fruit. Make a heavy syrup of sugar and water, boiling it until it will spin a thread, then drop in the peaches cut in cubes. Cook until thick then add a few drops of lemon and orange, and nuts if desired. Can and seal at once.

These activities were gathered with the fact that the addresses of a number of Germans were found among her belongings, brought about her conviction.

Married Life at $80 a Month

BY MISS ELLA LEONARD

"Could you lend me a cup of sugar, Mrs. Ellison?" Mrs. Sutton dropped in a limp heap on a chair by the kitchen table and leaned her head on her hand.

"Certainly," Olive Ellison took the cup and went to the pantry to fill it.

"You don't feel well this morning, do you?" she asked sympathetically, placing the sugar on the table.

"Oh, I'm well enough, only I'm so discouraged it's like dragging a heavy chain to move."

"A heavy heart is a poor equipment for a day's work, just as a light one buoys you up and takes easy sailing," the woman reached for her handkerchief.

"I haven't been light-hearted for so long I forgot how it feels. I'm about ready to toss up the sponge and quit."

"Oh, it's never so bad as that," said Olive hopefully. "The best way to put a brood of troubles to flight is to adjust things on a livable basis."

"Where's there?" determined effort, even on one side, things can usually be worked out, and with the boy as a bond, affairs are far from hopeless."

"I wish I could tell you my troubles," the woman looked hopelessly and appealingly. "But—"

"I am not much older than you. You surely have some experienced friend who could help you, and the only excuse possible for talking of such trouble is a sincere desire to get help. If I thought I could be of service I would be glad to listen."

"Some way, I have an idea that a happy person is more apt to be sensible, to get a healthy view of things. I am morbid, I see things crooked, and I can't tell how they really are."

"I must go back," she rose, drawing her shawl over her eyes to hide the trace of tears. "Jack is alone in the yard."

"If you think I can help you, come over any time," Olive laid a comforting hand on her shoulder. "Thank you," the woman crossed the porch and was gone.

LARGE FLOCK OF GEESE PASSES OVER JANESVILLE HEADING INTO THE EAST

Cold weather, a chilly wave, mixed at noon with a sprinkling of rain and this afternoon a flock of geese made the eyes of Janesville nimrod's bright. The wild fowl passed over the city shortly before 2:45 o'clock and were headed directly towards the east in the direction of La Prairie. This is the first large flock that has been seen in this vicinity thus far this fall. Hunters returned from the lakes report a total absence of game birds, only the lowly coot or mud-ben furnishing target practice.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
The Dentist Ought To Know.

I wish to thank you cordially for your letter of advice regarding the new and effective treatment for pyorrhea. My dentist asserts that the injection should be made in the arm or the back. In order to be perfectly sure, I venture to ask you to set me right.

Bad Advice for a Nursing Mother. I. B. M. asks what we think of the advice that a nursing mother should drink ale and beer.

Answer—We think that is the one time when a mother should not listen to the gratuitous advice of her friends. Alcoholic beverages, contrary to old ideas, reduce a mother's capacity to nurse her baby. Ale and beer may intoxicate, but they cannot feed or supply nourishing elements, like milk or candy does.

Use this milk a few times and learn to know its convenience, economy, safety for cooking, drinking, whipping, ice cream, candies

Its constant convenience appeals to every housewife. You may keep two or three, or a dozen cans of it in your pantry. It is always pure, sweet, clean and wholesome when you open it. And you only open it as you need it. The two sizes—"tall" and "baby" cans—add to its convenience and economy.

Carnation Milk

Clean—Sweet—Pure From Contented Cows

Carnation Milk is just fresh, sweet, pure, cow's milk, reduced to the consistency of cream by evaporation. It is hermetically sealed and sterilized to prevent contamination and to retain its purity and wholesomeness. Nothing is taken out but water. Nothing is added.

Carnation Milk is uniform in quality—and that is another great advantage which every housewife will appreciate. This also means economy and satisfaction in its use.

Carnation Milk has the flavor of purity. This distinctive flavor—which you will call delicious after you have tried it a few times—comes from the greater concentration of the butter fat and milk solids, which makes the flavor more pronounced.

In every recipe calling for ordinary milk or cream, use Carnation Milk, diluting it to the degree preferred.

The Battle-Cry

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

Author of "The Call of the Camerlunda"

Illustrations by C. D. Rhodes

The dark giant stood for a time silent, then he gravely nodded his head. "Them terms suits me," he said briefly.

The two men walked down to the fence and separated there, going in opposite directions.

A few minutes later Juanita, still standing fascinated in the doorway, was looking out across the shoulder of the missionary. He presided at the threshold with grave eyes, and, even after these peaceful years, there was something of familiar caress in the way his brown hand lay on his rifle.

Then the girl saw a strange and primitive ratification of treaty.

On either side of the little porch stood a group of solemn men, mostly bearded, mostly coatless, and all unarmed. In front of those, at the right stood Anse Hovey, his eyes still the dominant feature of the picture.

Over across from him was the taller and older chief of the other clan. They stood there gravely, with a courtesy that cloaked their hatred.

Out in the road was the "jolt-wagon," and in its deep bed the girl could see the canvas that covered its burden.

As Bad Anse took his place at the front of his escort his gaze met that of Juanita. He did not speak, but for an instant she saw his face harden, his eyes narrow, and his lips set themselves.

It was the glance of one who has been lashed across the face and who cannot strike back, but who will not soon forget.

This time the girl's eyes did not drop, and certainly they held no hint of relenting or plea for forgiveness.

But at that moment the head of the Hoveys turned from her and began speaking.

"I gives ye my hand, Milt McBriar."

"I got your message, Milt," he said casually, "an' I reckon you got my answer. I've brought back Little Nash."

"I'm obleeged ter ye." The McBriar paused, then volunteered: "Ef ther boy had took counsel of me, this thing wouldn't never he happened."

Bad Anse Hovey stood looking at the other, then he nodded.

"Milt," he carelessly announced at the end of his scrutiny, while the ghost of an ironical smile glinted in his eyes, though it left his lips grave, "I've got several hosses an' mules down thar in my barn that we found hitched out in ther timber when Nash an' his friends took to the lare'."

Again he paused and studied the faces of the McBriar men before he went on. "One of 'em is your own roan mare, Milt. One of 'em blongs ter Sam thar, and one is Bob's thar."

He pointed out each man as he spoke. "Ye can get 'em any time ye send down for 'em."

The girl caught her breath and, despite her dislike, acknowledged the cool insolence with which Anse had answered Milt's plea of innocence. Milt replied only with a scowl, so Anse contemptively continued, as though to himself: "Hit's right smart pity for a feller to go out shootin' in the night-time an' to take a kinsman's horse—with out takin' his counsel. It might lead to some misunderstanding."

A baleful glare flashed deep in the eyes of the taller man, and from the benchmen at his back came an uneasy shuffle of brogans.

But the voice of Good Anse Talbott relieved the tension.

"Stiddy, thar, men," he quietly cautioned. "Ye didn't hardly meet ter talk 'bout hosses. I'll lead them nags back myself, Milt."

Then Anse Hovey stepped forward and held out his hand.

"I gives ye my hand, Milt McBriar," he said, "that ther truce goes on."

"An' I gives ye mine," rejoined the other.

After a perfunctory shake the two turned together and went down the steps. The girl saw both squads lifting the covered burden from the wagon and carrying it around the road, where the other wagon waited. She believed that the feud was ended, but it is doubtful if either of the principals with great trust in the integrity of the other's intentions. It is certain that one of them at least was already making plans for the future, not at all in accordance with that compact of peace.

CHAPTER VIII.

As days grew into weeks Bad Anse Hovey heard nothing of the establishing of a school at the head of 'Tribulation, though all the gossip of the countryside which might interest a dictator filtered through the valleys to his house.

He smiled a little over the copy of Plutarch's "Lives," which was the companion of his leisure moments, and held his counsel. While he thought of Juanita herself with a resentment which sprang from hurt pride, he for her, as a menace to his power, only contempt.

But Juanita's resolve had in no wise weakened. She had seen that her original ideas had all been chaotic and born of ignorance, so she occupied herself, like a good and patient general, in pulling all the pins out of her little war map and drafting a completely new plan of campaign.

With Good Anse Talbott she rode up dwindling watercourses to the hovels of the "branch-water folks" and across hills where the cry of sickness or distress called him, and since his introduction was an open sesame, she found welcomes where she went.

And soon this figure, that walked with an almost lyric grace, yet with a boyish strength and liteness, became familiar along the roads and trails.

Instead of asking, "Who mought that be?" mountaineers nodded and said: "That's her," and some women added: "God bless that child."

She had been into many gloomy cabins that repelled the brightness of the summer sun, and she had been more like sunlight than anything that had ever come through their narrow doors before.

She sometimes rode over to the cabin of Fletch McNash and brought Little Dawn back with her to spend a day or two. The "turrin" girl and the mountain girl wandered together in the woods, and Dawn's diffidence gave way and her adoration grew. Twice Juanita found another visitor at the McNash cabin—Bad Anse Hovey. He recognized her only with a haughty nod, like that of an Indian chief, and she gave him in return a slight inclination of her head, accompanied by a glance of starchy contempt in her violet eyes. Yet, in the attitude of the mountaineers to the man, she saw such hero-worship as might have been accorded to some democratic young monarch walking freely among his subjects.

Once Fletch said: "Ma'am, how's yore school a-comin' on? Air ye gittin' things started ter suit ye?"

Juanita flushed.

"Not yet," she answered. "I'm trying to get acquainted first. When I do start, I hope to make up for lost time."

"I reckon ther school will be a right good thing over thar; don't ye 'low so, Anse?" Fletch's good-natured density had not recognized the hostility between his two guests.

Anse laughed quietly.

"I reckon," he said, "so long as the lady just keeps on sayin' 'not yet' thar won't be no harm done. I don't quarrel with dreams."

The lady flushed, and a hot retort rose to her lips, but she only smiled.

"I'm hiding my time, Fletch," she assured him. "My dream will come true."

But for this dream's fulfillment she must have land. There must be dormitories for boys and girls, and playgrounds where muscles and brains, grown slow from heavy harness, could be quickened. She fancied herself listening to the laughter of children who had not before learned to laugh.

But as she made inquiries of landholders whom a price might tempt to sell, she was met everywhere with a reserve which puzzled her until a barefooted and slouching farmer gave her a cue to its cause.

This man rubbed his brown toe in the dust and spoke in a lowered voice.

"I don't mind tellin' ye that I'd be plumb willin' ter sell out an' move." His eyes shone greedily as he added: "Fer a fair figger, but I moughtn't live ter move ef I sold out."

"What do you mean?" she asked, much puzzled.

"Wall, I wouldn't hardly like ter hev this travel back ter Bad Anse, but I've done been admonished not ter make no trades with strangers."

"Oh!" she exclaimed in a low voice, and her face flushed wrathfully. "Whom does your land belong to?" she demanded after a moment's silence. "Are you a bondman to Bad Anse Hovey? Isn't your property your own?"

He looked away and rummaged in his pockets for a few crumbs of leaf tobacco, then he commented with the dreary philosophy of hopelessness: "Hit's a God's blessed truth ther a feller hyarabouts is plumb lucky es long as his life's his own."

So she told herself, Bad Anse had begun his war with boycott! She could not even buy a foothold on which to begin her fight. Back there in the Philadelphia banks lay enough money, she bitterly reflected, to bribe its courts, to hire assassins and snuff out human lives, yet, since the edict of one man carried the force of terror, she could not purchase a few acres to teach little children and care for the sick. At least it was a confession that, for all his fine pretense of scorn, the man recognized and feared the potentiality of her efforts.

As the bright greens of June were scorched into the dusky hues of July and the little spears of corn grew taller, she began to feel conscious of a certain drawing back, even of those who had been her warm admirers, and to notice scowls on strange faces as they eyed her.

Somewhere a poison squad was at work. Of that she felt sure, and her eyes flashed as she thought of its authorship. Each day brought her new warnings offered under the semblance of kindness and friendship.

"Folks hereabouts liked her powerful well, but hit warn't hardly likely ther Bad Anse, ner Milt McBriar, would suffer her to go forward with her projects. They'd done been holdin' off 'cause she war a woman, an' she'd better quit of her own behest."

"So they were willing to let her surrender with the honors of war! Her lips tightened.

In answer to detailed questioning her informant would shake his head vaguely and suspect that "hit warn't rightly none of his business now; he just 'lowed hit war a kindly act ter give her timely warnin'."

CHAPTER IX.

One afternoon, while old Milt McBriar was sitting on the porch of his house, a horseman rode up and "lighted."

The horseman was not of pleasant expression, but he knew his mission and was sure of his welcome.

"Evenin', Luke," welcomed the McBriar chief, and as the visitor sank into a chair with a nod, he laconically announced:

"I've done found out who kilt Nash Watt."

Old Milt never showed surprise. It was his pride that his features had banished all register of emotion. Now he merely leaned over and knocked the ash from his pipe against the railing.

"Wall," he commanded curtly, "let's hev yore tale."

"They picked out a man fer ther job that hain't been mixed up in no feud fightin' heretofore," pursued the other with unflinching calmness. "He's a feller that nobody wouldn't suspect; but bein' peaceable an' mostly sober, but he shoots his squirrels through the head every time he throws up his gun. 'Thet war ther kind of man they wanted."

Milt McBriar shifted his position a little. He seemed bored.

"Who war this feller?"

The bearer of tidings was reserving his climax and refused to be hurried.

"I reckon ye'll be right smart astonished when I names his name, but thar hain't no chaast of bein' mistook. I've done run ther thing down."

"I hain't never astonished," retorted McBriar. "Who war he?"

"I reckon I knows," confessed Luke with a somewhat surly expression.

But Milt McBriar was paying no attention. His face was darkening.

"I wish I could afford ter git ther real man!" he exclaimed abruptly. "I wish I durst hev Anse Hovey kilt."

"Wall"—this time it was the underling who spoke casually—"I reckon I mought as well die fer a sheep as a lamb. Shell I kilt Anse Hovey fer ye?"

The chieftain looked at him during a long pause, then slowly shook his head.

"No, Luke," he said quietly. "I hain't quite ready ter die myself yet. I reckon ef I hed ye ter kilt Bad Anse thet's 'bout whut'd happen. Jest git ther lamb this trip an' let ther old ram live a spell."

So, one unexpectably sultry morning, a few days after that informal session, Good Anse Talbott arrived at the William Everson's house. As Juanita Eddowd appeared at the door to greet him he came at once to the point.

"Fletch McNash he's done been kilt," he said. "Bout twilight last night, es he war a-comin' in from ther barn somebody shot one shoot from ther lare'. I reckon hit'd be right smart comfort ter his woman an' Little Dawn ef ye could ride over thar an' help 'tend ther buryin'. Kin ye start now?"

Dinner Stories

A tenderfoot was standing directly behind the dealer in an old-time poker game in a western mining town, and saw the latter deal himself Aces from the bottom of the pack. He turned to the native who stood beside him, who also had been watching the deal closely, but the face of the native was quite expressionless.

"Say, did you see that?"

"See what?" queried the native. "Why," exclaimed the tenderfoot, in some surprise, "that man just dealt himself four Aces from the bottom of the pack! Didn't you see it?"

"Well," responded the native, complacently, "it's his deal, ain't it?"

"Your honor," said the arrested chauffeur in a Chicago court, "I tried to warn the man, but the horn would not work."

"Then why did you not slacken speed, rather than run him down?"

"A light seemed to dawn upon the prisoner."

"Gee, your honor," he said, "that's one on me—I never thought of that."

"Don't you think it strange that a man's good fortune so often turns his head?"

"No more strange than that his bad fortune usually turns the heads of his friends."

Their long acquaintance had ripened.

PENNANT CHAMPIONS DEFEATED ON MONDAY

New York Wallops the Boston Red Sox in a Double Header and Brooklyn Defeats the Phillies.

New York, Oct. 5.—The New York Americans on Monday defeated the Boston champions in both sections of a double header, 6 to 1 and 3 to 2. New York has now won five straight games from Boston. New York led, Leonard hit in the first game, making nine hits in six innings. Peckinpah made three of the hits and drove in three runs. Mordecai, the pitcher, held the new champions safe at all stations. An error by Malsel was responsible for Boston's only run. In the second game, Caldwell, who held Boston to four hits, won a pitcher's battle from Foster, the visiting pitcher weakening in the eighth, when the Yankees scored twice on Peckinpah's home run, singles by Pipp and Bannan and sacrifice by Pipp. Manager Moran, Pitcher Alexander and Catcher Killefer of the Philadelphia Nationals, and President Tener of the National league attended the games.

Spy on Moran. Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 5.—Brooklyn defeated Philadelphia on Monday, 8 to 2, in the short season game of the season, it requiring only one hour and three minutes to complete the nine innings.

After the home team hit scattered, while Brooklyn's victory was due largely to two extra base drives by Daubert and an error by Stock.

Pitchers Wood and Shore of the Boston Red Sox witnessed the game. After the fourth inning Bancroft and Niehoff left the game in order to give Byrne and Eugey some practice and Stock shifted over to shortstop.

BAUMANN'S COLTS WIN FROM DORBACHER'S TEAM

Last night at the Miller allers Baumann's Colts won over the crack Dorbacher's team, from Beloit, by 43 pins. The Colts took the first two events by 110 pins, but Dorbacher's team took the last one by 57 pins. There has been some very good scores made in these matches games for so early in the season, and it is expected that later on in the year some championship bowling teams will be turned out. The high team for the match last night was Christy from Beloit, with a score of 227. Both Newman and Osborn of Janesville rolled over the two hundred mark.

Tonight the Purcell, Pen and Blue Ribbons teams will meet.

YOUNG SCOTTY MUST EXPLAIN ROUGH WORK

Young Scotty, the Jones Island featherweight, must appear before the boxing commission this afternoon to answer to the charge of rough work in the recent bout with a Chicago boxer, Kibben, and Mitchell must also appear before the commission to answer the charge of stalling in their ten round bout.

It begins to look as if Jack Britton, once regarded as the most dangerous of American lightweights, has run his race as a championship contender. The Chicagoan undoubtedly has many good matches left in his list of system still, but the odds are greatly against him ever attaining the championship. Apparently Britton has been slipping for several months. The reason for this first bout with Ted Kid Lewis at Boston, when it was stated that the Briton both outboxed and outboxed the American, came as a surprise. The strong manner in which Johnny Griffiths finished against Britton at Canton on Labor day made the critics sit up and take notice. Only a fine lead built up in the early rounds saved him from an adverse decision.

MANAGERS OF TITLE TEAMS WERE UNKNOWN UNTIL THIS SEASON

Brought Teams of Misfits to Top Through Hard Work—Life History of Morand and Carrigan.

New York, Oct. 6.—When the Philadelphia Nationals and the Boston Americans meet in the world's series Thursday new leaders will be seen at the managerial helm and the success or failure of the contending clubs will depend, to a great extent, on the skill to which these men pilot their baseball machines. In Pat Moran and Bill Carrigan the National and Red Sox respectively have diamond directors who are equipped to take their place in world's series history alongside George Stallings, John McGraw and Jake Stahl.

Both Moran and Carrigan have earned their positions at the head of the two pennant-winning clubs by their chosen line of life work. Each has risen from the ranks after serving a hard apprenticeship and there are no secrets of the national game with which they are not familiar. When the teams take the field it will be much a battle of managerial wits between Moran and Carrigan as it will be a contest of skill and endurance between the individual players and the teams composed as units.

In one respect the Red Sox leader will have an advantage over his Philadelphia rival for in some of the games, at least Carrigan will be seen in catching uniform. Moran is just familiar with the duties devolving upon the backstop for he made his reputation as a catcher as Carrigan has done but during the past season has handled his team from the mound while Carrigan has been in the thick of the pennant struggle much of the time.

Moran a Mill Hand. Patrick J. Moran, who has won a niche in baseball's hall of fame, by reason of his whipping what was considered a mediocre ball club into a championship team, is a product of a New England mill. Like Connie Mack, who left a Massachusetts shoe factory to win fame, Pat Moran gave up a job in a textile mill in Fitchburg, Mass., to make a name in his favorite pastime.

Moran was born in Fitchburg a little more than forty years ago, and at an early age found his way to a job in a mill. There he was told that a young Pat first became an adept in handling a ball by playing with yarn balls. In any event he easily took to baseball as he grew up he played on amateur teams in Fitchburg. He first came into general notice as a catcher for the Fitchburg Athletic club.

Moran was so good that he was offered a place on the Central Parks team of Orange, Mass., where he played in 1887 and 1888, and then, as all good ball players do, he found his way to larger fields. In 1897 Moran won the Lyons team of the New York State league, catching and hitting six games. The next year he caught ninety-three for the same club. In 1899 Moran was purchased by the great old team of the old Easterns and 1900 found him behind the bat on the Boston National League grounds. He spent five years with that team and then joined the Chicago Nationals and was with the Cubs when it was a champion ball club.

Sent to Phillies. Fate sent Moran to the Philadelphia Nationals in 1910 as a second string catcher. Charles S. Doolin was then the star and Pat did not get many chances to show his worth behind the bat, and in the last few years of his career with the Phillies he was used to help develop pitchers. In this he had a wonderful success. Many give Moran credit for making Grover C. Alexander a pitcher he is today. He helped also to develop pitchers Mauer and Eppa Rixey.

Moran's selection to manage the Phillies came as a surprise to the baseball world, as it was not thought he had ambition in that line. The first intimation that he might succeed Doolin came during the world's series last year and shortly afterward the announcement was made.

From a disorganized ball club due to numerous changes Moran welded together a smooth harmonious team of players. In the spring no one picked the Quakers to win. They opened the season by winning eight games straight and making numerous predictions that the team would crack. Moran kept them in front. Pennant talk among the players was barred by Moran. Each day the team went out to win the game of the day. Moran sought to produce harmony among the men. The players respected him and the result was that things moved along just as the new baseball general had planned them.

Manager William F. Carrigan will be the first playing manager to figure in a world's series in several years. He has specialized in catching his left-handed twirlers and his behavior behind the bat in games pitched by Leonard and Ruth. Never a great catcher mechanically, Carrigan for many years has been credited with being a better aid to the pitcher in determining the weaknesses of batsmen, and taking advantage of this knowledge, than any backstop in the league.

Like several other members of the Red Sox, he is a college man. He came to Boston from Holy Cross in 1907. The following season he was sent to Toronto of the Eastern league for experience, returning to Boston with the game of the day. Carrigan at the close of the Eastern season. He has been with Boston since.

when Manager Jake Stahl impressed Carrigan and Heinie Wagner to serve with him as joint members of an unofficial board of strategy.

This board, which frequently had the benefit of advice from President James R. McAleer, himself an old player and manager, met twice a day during that series. In the morning before the members of the team gathered at a body, and in the evening after the game. At the first meeting they mapped the plan of the campaign of that day. In the later session they discussed the tactics and successes of the game which had passed, and the application of their observations of those that were to come. The result was a Red Sox success.

A somewhat similar board has grown up in the American league pennant winners of this year. Carrigan and Wagner again are members, and the manager has called into his council the captain, Harry, with the latter's learning from the school of Mack, and his observations on many fields at his command.

The connection has proved a happy one. Carrigan and Wagner are bound personally by the ties of nearly a decade of companionship as members of the same team, room-mates, in fact, and Carrigan and Barry bound by earlier association as members of the same college team, Barry having played with Holy Cross during Carrigan's last year there. It is believed that these deliberations will play a large part in the playing plans of the series this year.

MORRIS MILLER

Although he was thirty-five years old recently, it is likely that for several seasons to come Sam Crawford, the Detroit outfielder, the "Nebraska peach" will maintain his supremacy as the hardest hitter of the game.

Many have said that a batting average as high as .300, a comrade in arms, Ty Cobb, but when it comes to propelling the pellet with force and vigor he has the edge on the "Georgia peach."

The old hit and run play, once the favorite method of attack in the pincushes by most of the teams in baseball, has almost completely disappeared from the big show almost as completely as have the stars who made it famous and used it successfully. Occasionally one sees it tried in a major league game, but these occasions are few and far between, and familiar has it become through long absence that many of the present generation of "rooters" fail to recognize it when it is shown.

The lean baseball year of 1915 has forced the American association moguls to consider some retractions. This year's series, which was decided in a meeting in Chicago to be a 154-game schedule and a player limit of sixteen. This number will be carried from May 15 to August 15. Before and after those dates twenty men can be carried. No agreement was reached on salaries.

Coach Murphy at Northwestern has ordered that his men refrain from reading newspaper accounts at Northwestern and other institutions where the purple squad plays until after the football season is over.

The reports are garbled and generally instigated by an interested party with a particular purpose in view. Murphy says, "The coaching staff will see to it that the players are given correct information. They should know. If any of the men want to keep scrapbooks, they can have someone else clip the articles for them."

Boston critics and fans say they do not fear Alexander because world series history shows that no one has won three of the four games which the Pirates needed to make them world champions. If Alexander can appear in three games of the coming series and win them all, world look like a cinch that the Phillies would win. But Alexander may not be able to do what Adams accomplished, though those who are familiar with his prowess insist that Alexander is much greater than was Adams. Manager Morand pointing Alexander out for the world's series. He is giving him lots of rest and just enough occasional work to keep him on edge in the hope that he will come through during the series. But Alexander is not to carry the entire burden. Eppa Rixey, too, is being trained for the order, and if he should be in form he is sure to be a troublesome chip for the Red Sox.

Cooks of Millikin university at Decatur, Ill., will give special instructions in football, given speciality that they may root more intelligently for their school team. Coach will conduct classes at which the intricacies of the game will be explained. The faculty has indicated the plan for the girls' classes in football instruction, believing that the football team can play to a better advantage if urged on by organized rooting.

The complete record of Ty Cobb's record in major league baseball is a clear index of the wonderful ability of this diamond star. Cobb joined the Detroit club on Aug. 28, 1906, and during the decade in which he has played for the Tigers has rolled up a grand batting average of .358 in 1,238 games. In this period Cobb went to bat 4,685 times, making 1,729 hits and 875 runs. He also has 485 stolen bases to his credit, an average of forty-eight and a fraction a year.

If there is any man in the world harder to pluck than Miller Huggins, the average National league twirler hasn't yet lapped the individual. One day when Huggins was battling against Viv Williams, then with the Pirates, the Rabbit fouled off twelve consecutive balls. He was an easy going cuss, but he became highly incensed and yelled to the umpire: "Get a batter! I'm tired of throwing the ball to a bunch of nothing like that guy there now!" "Get pardon, but I can't help you," replied the ump. "You will have to get rid of Huggins first. The rules say so, and I can't go behind the rules, you know."

George F. Slosson, the veteran billiard player whose balk line cue work has won him an enviable reputation internationally, has decided to enter the ranks of the three cushion carom players. He will represent New York in the Interstate league contests which continue until early in May. In addition to his strong balk line play Slosson for many years has been considered a master cueist at single cushions, and his many friends predict that at three cushions he will prove to be equally adept. The entry of "The Student," as Slosson is familiarly known in the world of billiards, will add a great deal of interest in the coming tournament.

The Detroit team will not train at Gulfport, Miss., next spring. Incidentally, Manager Hughie Jennings is apt not to put in an appearance at the coming world series, which he has never missed, because he intends to leave this section for Texas as soon as the season is over and make a search for new training grounds. The objection to Gulfport, according to Jennings, was that it was much too windy, but he would consider it ideal if he had ever trained at Charlottesville with the Griffins.

When this credit for the triumph of the Phillies is being distributed the fans of Quakertown should not overlook President Baker. When it was known that Philadelphia was to have a new manager and that his name was mentioned, but President Baker was about the only one who mentioned that of Moran. Everybody liked Pat Moran and wished him well, but there were many who had grave doubts concerning his ability as a manager. Baker had no such doubts. Shortly after he had announced the selection of Moran he had this to say on the subject: "I did not make up my mind in a hurry," he said, "I had several candidates in view and I talked to each one of them about the team in a more or less off-hand manner and asked each one what his ideas of the possibilities of improving the club were. I made up my mind in the course of time that Moran was the man for the place, and I believe that he will justify my faith in him." Moran certainly made good.

If the weather is favorable and the Boston folks are as much interested in the Red Sox in the world series as they have been during the regular campaign, the chances are that all attendance records in the history of the series will be broken in Boston. With a park which seats 43,000 and an accommodation no less than 50,000 there is not going to be the scarcity of seats which has usually prevailed. Heretofore many fans have been kept away from the games because they were not sure that they could secure accommodations, but in Boston this year there will be no occasion for such doubts, though there is some doubt whether room will be ample in Philadelphia, where the park is small.

Charles Brickley, former Harvard star, now coaching the Johns Hopkins team, is reported to be teaching his charges to "duckstep." He has his men bend over, start swinging their arms and then walk along with short, waddling steps. This, Brickley says, will help their charging. Eastern papers are wondering whether or not this means he wants his pupils to charge fiercely like a duck.

SINCE ZEPPELIN RAIDS THERE IS AN INCREASE IN ASTRONOMY STUDENTS

London, Oct. 5.—Since Zeppelin raids have become more the rule than the exception in London and environs, there has been a marked increase in public interest in astronomy. Just now the newspapers are filled with discussions about this or that star—discussions directly attributable to the fact that Londoners have acquired the habit of stargazing in the hope of sighting hostile air craft. Toward eleven o'clock at night, the usual "Zep" time, perhaps a third of London looks skyward.
